Subject: Microsoft Settlement

My message to the Attorney Generals of the nine hold-out states concerns their winning of a major victory against Microsoft and their refusal to let go when the fighting should stop.

There comes a time after many years of argument that settlement should be made, not only as common sense, but as a matter of business. Our economic concerns are not merely local, but national, and more importantly, global. Our position concerning the freedom to innovate involves national and international prestige, and it is in our "public interest" to remain the foremost nation on earth. Hampering one company can stifle innovation among all our computer companies, and at any time we must remain unified in our effort to provide the best that there is.

Sincerely, Susan Church Moore
